A person who teaches heresy is called a heretic. A church, movement or organization that claims to be Christian, but which nevertheless teaches heresy, is a cult of Christianity. Christians who have not learned discernment easily fall prey to such groups.

Heresy and Heretics - deviation from orthodox Christian ...

Church history balances us. When we correct a fellow believer who commits a mistake, we over-correct most of the time. We think we are perfect, but we are far from being model Christians. Our church history is the most significant evidence that our ancestors weren't perfect individuals.

7 Reasons A Christian Believer Should Study Church History ...

Unlike what the Church spread, [Heretics] were rarely Satanists or non-believers. In fact, in many cases, they had a stronger and more realist belief in God than that of the Church followers. It is just that the Heretics believed the [Church's] ways were wrong and corrupted, and that is why they followed their own way.
