deaf to the vile jabber of the ugly old fools, the sun may come up each day but when our star is out...our night, it shall last forever and. give me a thousand kisses and a hundred more. a thousand more again, and another hundred, another thousand, and again a hundred more, as we kiss these passionate thousands let.

Eleven Poems of Catullus | InTranslation

Catullus intended to offend, which is why he is so loved and hated. It's outrageous, one of Catullus's trademarks, although not to everybody's taste, of course. It was a challenge. No matter how nasty or repellent he gets in certain of his poems, he manages to do it with such great impact and such style you're forced to swallow them as art.

Down and Dirty: Translations of Catullus - Harvard Review

Catullus is a great Latin poet whose verse is astonishingly contemporary in the treatment of his themes of love and betrayal. Most of his poems are brief, less than 20 lines, and about a third of these are about his love affair with Lesbia, who is probably Clodia, a married woman from one of Rome's leading families.

Introduction. Catullus, a master of lyric poetry, epigram, and other forms during the late Roman Republic, was born in Verona in 87 BCE, according to Jerome's Chronicle, which also reports that he died at the age of thirty. Since the latest datable references in his poems relate to 54 BCE, most scholars assign Catullus's birth to 84 (thus treating one of Jerome's statements as true), but ...

In the opening sequence, for instance, two poems belong to the beginning of Catullus's affair with Lesbia (2, "Sparrow," and 3, "Mourn for the sparrow"), followed by two poems from the success of the affair (5, "Give me kisses," and 7, "How many kisses"), followed in turn by a failed attempt to end the affair (8, "Poor Catullus") and the bitter rejection of Lesbia (11).

Gaius Valerius Catullus | Poetry Foundation

Catullus wrote his poems and epigrams of personal life during the late Roman Republic, and they survive in an anthology of more than a hundred items. Many are caustic, satirical, and erotic, often lampooning well-known characters of the day including Julius Caesar and his friends. Others are tender, solemn, and graceful.
